GSEI

Global Social Enterprise Institute

If you're asking for permission, you're not changing the world

Located in the Madden School of Business at Le Moyne College and with an office in New York City, the GSE Institute facilitates global exchange and cultivates talent in the social enterprise sector by spearheading dynamic multi-disciplinary programming, courses, research, and community engagement initiatives. These efforts draw upon and leverage an international footprint of 250 university collaborators and a growing ecosystem of 5,000 social enterprises, entrepreneurs, and service providers.

A conglomerate of GSEI is Source Funding, which is the world's first non-predatory lending platform for high impact entrepreneurs. It streamlines the small business loan application process and matches social entrepreneurs of all backgrounds with the qualified community banks and loan programs that are most likely to provide financing.

Source Funding Helps Women Entrepreneurs Succeed In the Business World

bitly.com Full time working woman earns 78 cents for every dollar a man earns. Source funding is working to change that. Yesterday, we worked with women pursuing their MBAs at the Martin J. Whitman School of Business at Syracuse University. Their creative ideas and drive for success is why we focus on empowering women to start their own businesses. We look forward to working with more underrepresented groups in the future.
